WHO IS MY NEIGHBOUR?

Today we have a remarkable gospel reading. The story appears also in Mark and Matthew, though they tell it rather differently. For Mark, the scribe, Jesus' interlocutor, is the hero of the story, and he accepts what Jesus says about the "greatest commandment"; and now we notice a real meeting of minds between him and Jesus. For Matthew, it is impossible that a scribe should be a hero, so in his version it is Jesus who names the two greatest commandments. But in Luke it is all different. As in Matthew, the "lawyer" (a favourite word of Luke's) is "testing" Jesus; so we know he's up to no good, especially when he asks Jesus, "what am I to do in order to inherit eternal life?". Jesus throws the question back at him, and asks him, "What is written in the Law? How do you read?". We are slightly surprised when he responds, absolutely correctly, "you should love the Lord your God... and your neighbour as yourself". Then Jesus says in a slightly offhand way, "A good answer. Do that and you will live".

However, the story now takes a new turn, as the "lawyer", "wishing to justify himself", asks another question: "and who is my neighbour?". This leads into one of the best stories of the entire gospel; and Luke is the finest story-teller of them all. You know how it goes: "A man was going down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and he fell among muggers. They took off his clothes, rained blows on him and went away, leaving him half dead". So far, so familiar; the track from Jerusalem to Jericho is a very dangerous road, and you should never, even today, attempt it alone. I have frequently done that route but always with energetic and vigorous students to discourage hostile incursions.

Now it takes a different turn, and there is something of a shock. It starts with a rare but telling phrase, which can be translated as "by coincidence"; and that should get us listening, because in God's providence there is no such thing as coincidence. And here the "coincidence" is the arrival of two religious figures, a "priest" and a "Levite". This is a surprising turn of events, and not at all what we thought might happen. On the whole we are not expecting much good of them (Jesus and religious figures do not get on very well together, as a rule); and so it proves. For instead of doing anything to help the unfortunate victim, both of them "saw, and passed by on the other side". This word, "pass-by-on-the-other-side", is not used anywhere else in the New Testament, and clearly indicates a massive avoidance strategy. We are not being invited to applaud them. Then things get even odder; for a third character appears; now Jesus' hearers might have expected this one to be "a good Jewish layman" or even "a Galilean". For Jesus was a Galilean; and that particular group was not very popular down South. Instead we get..." (and, yes, I know that you know perfectly well what is going to happen; but before I write the name I should like you to think of whatever group you most dislike): "...A SAMARITAN"; this was a very foreign group, who had a Temple to rival that of Jerusalem, and were absolutely at daggers drawn with the set-up in Judea; and it is this unlikely group that produces the person who is going to behave impeccably.

For this alien from the Planet Zog not only does not "pass by on the other side", but makes straight for the half-dead person, careless of the consequences, binds his wounds and heals him with oil and vinegar; then he gives him a lift to the nearest hostelry, where his generosity knows no bounds, for he actually instructs the Inn-keeper to do even more for the unfortunate victim, "and I shall pay the difference"

Then we are faced with the question; it is put to the lawyer, but it also speaks to us: "which of these three in your view acted as neighbour to the victim?". The lawyer cannot bring himself to mention the hated tribal name of "Samaritan", but mumbles, "the one who did the mercy-thing with him". And Jesus, talking to us quite as much as to him, says "off you go; and you are to do the same". What is your answer to this?

Foundation Governors needed for St Joseph's Catholic Primary School, Maida Vale, The governing body of St Joseph's, with the Headteacher, has overall responsibility for the running of the school. No special qualifications are needed and the most important thing is to have an interest in Governance and be prepared to play an active part in the governing body's work.

However, we would particularly welcome nominations from parishioners with the following skills: project management, human resources and finance. Training is available for all governors and this governing body has an expectation that those new to being a governor attend free induction training.
